Changing Lifestyle: How to Make Every Patient Contact Count through MI

This course is designed for practitioners, who already have introductory knowledge and understanding of MI technical and relational skills. The workshops are designed specifically to develop more advanced technical skills in eliciting behaviour change. Topics include:

- Advanced skills in client engagement and evoking health behaviour change
- Managing change talk in more complex scenarios
- Dealing with ambivalence and successfully managing resistance
- Guidelines in the application of advanced MI practice

Tutor: Dr. Jeff Breckon CPsychol.

Jeff is a Reader in Exercise Psychology and a BPS AND HCPC Chartered Psychologist. He delivers training in MI to a variety of health professionals and organisations covering health behaviour change, organisational change and in clinical and community settings. He is a member of MINT (Motivational Interviewing Network of Trainers), BPS (British Psychological Association) and BASES (British Association of Sport and Exercise Sciences). Jeff was trained in MI in 1996 and as an MI trainer by Professor Bill Miller and Professor Steve Rollnick (Quebec, 2000) – the founders of MI. Jeff has trained MI to organisations across the UK, Europe and North America and delivered the international MI 'training new trainers' (TNT) programme in Barcelona (June, 2009) and Krakow (October 2013).
